To whom it may concern,

This letter is to bring to your attention an exceptional person, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

I am a registered nurse; I graduated in general nursing in 1968 from St. Vincent's Hospital Melbourne, and then in midwifery in 1969 from Royal Women's Hospital, Melbourne. Following this I have worked in public hospitals in Melbourne, Sydney, Perth and London in the field of general nursing. I was in charge of a medical ward for some years, and then specialized in a cardio-thoracic unit.

I first came in contact with the teaching of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh through a psychologist, who was very successfully incorporating Bhagwan's ideas in his therapy. This had such a dramatic, positive effect on my life, that I sought more contact with his (Bhagwan's) teachings through his books and tapes.

I have discovered, that, because of the love and positivity I have now found in myself and others, through this man's amazing ability to touch the truth, I am now able to give far more of myself as a nurse. I have found that I am now more clear and open to my patient's needs, and to those of my co-workers. I am able to deal with the emotional and physical stress that exists when dealing with ill, defenceless people. The reason for this is that I am more relaxed and clear, because of the meditations that Bhagwan has devised. I also feel that I now approach my patients as whole human beings, and can therefore meet their needs more effectively and efficiently.

Yours sincerely

Marcia A. Bell R.N.
