To whom it may concern

I am a student of theoretical physics and electronic engineering. Studying physics I came to feel that none, or very few, of the teaching Professors had a real understanding of the cosmos, and the fundamental laws of physics were just scratching at the surface of a tremendous, huge, unknown organic unity, that was not sufficiently understandable by the approach of the physicist. The quest for knowing more about this became so strong, that I interrupted my studies and went to India to learn from Indian mystics, attending various religious schools (Aurobindo, Shivananda). I got a glimpse that more is possible.

After two years of search I happened to hear my first lecture tape of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh. For the first time in my life I felt that there is someone who knows exactly the things I was looking for.

Now I'm his disciple for almost four years, and through his teachings and meditations my vision of the cosmos and myself as a part of it has tremendously been enriched. Now I feel science and engineering are tools in my hand to give expression to my inner feeling of oneness with the whole. Due to that feeling, I was able to continue my studies far better than ever before.
