I've been working as a teacher in the field of languages and literature at grammar schools for seven years now and during that time experienced a lack of any positive, life-affirming direction in the curricula as well as in the attitude of most of the teachers. Nobody really seems to know how to handle the task of preparing young people for a responsible and creative life in harmony with society and nature. The consequence is dissatisfaction, desorientation and aggressive negativity on both sides.

Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh sees this plight of the modern Western man - who is being reproduced again and again in our schools - very clearly. His writings gave me courage and led me towards his meditations, therapeutic techniques and his vision of the new man. The transformation of the individual is the only chance for our planet, and our schools have to contribute in this process.

Under the inspiration of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh this new way of being is coming into existence in Rajneeshpuram and at other places of the world - a man and a concept that should not be missed.
