To whom it may concern,

I have been a sanyasin of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh for 4½ years now and find that this contact with Him is progressively and dramatically changing my life.

To sit in the presence of Bhagwan for me is to feel in contact with an ocean of silence and love that awakens that quality within me. A communion happens that evokes also an awareness of that potential within everyone.

In my work as a registered nurse at a general hospital in Australia this quality has made a noticeable difference. My relationships with patients and my ability to deal with daily work situations has matured and developed. It seems as if a hidden source of energy is being uncovered.

It is most noticeable in the people who work here at Rajneeshpuri. They obviously have an inner resource that means there is little stress or relationship tension, and consequently an incredible amount of work can be accomplished in a laughing, co-operative environment. And every day that Bhagwan drives by and we greet him by the roadside it is a reminder to me of that inner source. Often in that brief moment, a whole change of approach is possible that throws a quite different light on what we felt to be problems.

I can only write from my own experience but I feel incredibly thankful that I should live at the same time as this undoubted spiritual master.
