

To Whom It May Concern:

Greetings.

I am a member of Rajneesh Neo-Samyas International Commune and I work here as a cashier. I see many people each day, handle cash and keep records of all the transactions. In addition I supervise an assistant who helps me attend to customers and with bookkeeping.

What I have found about this work is that it is not just work. It is a kind of meditation, a worship. If I am happy and totally involved in my work, whatever happens, everything goes smoothly. If I am preoccupied with something else while I am working, things do not go as smoothly: I forget something important, I upset someone unintentionally and so on.

Now what is starting to happen is that I am beginning to find a calm, quiet space inside myself that makes everything that used to upset or preoccupy me before seem insignificant.

I began this work about a year ago, and at first liked the people a lot more than the accounting. Now I feel at home in every aspect of my work, and find it unnecessary to differentiate between the different things I need to do. Altogether, through working in the commune under the spiritual guidance of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, I have gained a great sense of fulfillment in what I do.

I first had contact with Bhagwan's teachings through reading some of his books which really impressed me. I became a disciple without ever hearing him speak, or seeing him.

I am finding real joy and fulfillment in Bhagwan's commune. I feel he is a tremendous asset to the United States. His understanding of contemporary human problems far surpasses that of anyone else I have read or known.

Sincerely,
Ma Anand Rasila
