

To Whom it May Concern:

I feel that I have gained much from Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh as a spiritual guide and master, and am still learning much from his incredible teachings. His knowledge and understanding of life has been communicated to me non-verbally (without him needing to have spoken to me), but acquired instead through reading books of his discourses, hearing tape of what he has said, being with many of his disciples who have already seen him and heard him speak - generally from his very positive influence which has extended to the country where I live (Australia).

Much of what he teaches about love and life is impossible to accurately put into words and this is what he seems to be conveying by his silence. So he is no less a spiritual leader than any other who have used words to express their religion.
