To whom it may concern,

I got a PhD degree in 1966 in chemistry and worked in research in Universities for example Princeton in Industries and patent offices.

Already as a student and later in research and management I realized that always few people of outstanding overlooking capability gave the science chemistry a big push forward.

I was always looking for a connection of what a living specie means in connection with chemical reaction mechanisms which make all the living species capable to live in a body out of organic material. But the deeper you go in this question what life is from the chemical understanding the more the chemist stumbles upon the point where the living body is not only determined by a particular chemical structure which is relatively easy to analyse but is determined also by another, I would say "chemical overstructure" which makes for example the seasonal change in a tree the birth, growing and consequently dying of a body, the phenomenon of love or the sickness of cancer.

The understanding of such life appearances is not only simply understandable by what is known in the ordinary chemistry up to now.

My contact with Bhagwan was when I read his books and was stumbling here and there upon for me a new biochemical viewpoint what he calls alchemy of life which was just an answer to what I was looking for as the "chemical overstructure" and for what we have not a direct influence by simple changing of the body chemistry.

The exceptional new viewpoint of an alchemical change of the biochemical body structure of the human being for a better feeling of life makes Bhagwan from my viewpoint as a chemist to an extraordinarily man in the field of an wholistic biochemical understanding of the human body. It leads without any doubt to a new understanding of the human being.

Since I am a disciple of Bhagwan I realize on myself a much better capability of my brain functioning in the scientific thinking. Even a hard work is filled with much joy and I am inspired particular for a better organization of my work.

It is amazing how I can observe here in the Buddha field of Rajneeshpuram (that is how Bhagwan calls his Energy field) a much faster changing of the alchemical structure of the human being as somewhere else and it is clearly only by the physical presence of Bhagwan.

The USA is an outstanding country in any field of the chemical science. For me the presence of Bhagwan in this country is an contribution in this field which cannot enough emphasised as exceptional.

Sincerely yours

Deva Dwepam
