To whom it may concern

The first time that I read one of Bhagwan's books resulted in a complete change in my way of life.

It was a kind of coming home. He was giving so many indications about so many subjects. All of it was so clear that I bought more books, I went to a meditation center for information, started listening to tape lectures and participating in the meditation techniques. Try to share with friends what it had given to me. Some of them became suspicious, some began reading the books.

After half a year the feeling to take sannyas was there I hesitated for a while, but then finally it became a celebration. I already had been wearing orange clothes for some months. The day I asked for sannyas I put on new red clothes and went to the nearest meditation center for a sannyas form, filled it out and wrote a letter to Bhagwan. Posted it and went with a friend to a nice restaurant to celebrate it.

Some weeks later the answer arrived with my new name and a beautiful inspiring guidance for me.

I went to another meditation center for a mala (necklace) and then it started really. I was a sannyasin of a man I had never seen before. I felt great true

In this beautiful man.

I had discussion about Bhagwan with different people who argued against him, although I put a lot of effort into convincing them about my point of view. Until finally I myself had a question.

Is there an argument for love? No.

So from that moment on I never argued about Bhagwan anymore. And I understood that it is an individual relationship with a master. Last year I received a beautiful present, the money to buy a ticket to visit him in Rajneeshpuram (expression of rajneesism). The first time I saw Bhagwan in person having been a disciple for two years, I knew that I needed this man as my religious master and felt thankful for his being there.

He is teaching in silence with so much love and understanding, that it is almost unbelievable.

Belief is not necessary, he is alive and you're welcome to visit Rajneeshpuram any day.

Rajneeshpuram is blossoming into something really beautiful inspired by his love.

Sannyas, what is it? Sannyas is a love affair

With love for Bhagwan
